

Looking for One of Europe's Best Master Programs in Public Affairs?

Sciences Po is a highly competitive international university, and one of France's top universities, ranking 20th in the world in 2012 for Politics and International Studies. The Master in Public Affairs provides students with the essential practical and theoretical tools needed for implementing policy in a rapidly changing world.

SciencesPo.

Financial aid — including two full scholarships — now available!

The MPA gives students the ability to take on leadership roles in an ever-changing job market. Our graduates learn strong problem-solving skills. They hit the ground running as they enter their careers.

With just 40 students admitted per year from over 25 countries and an international faculty of practitioners and scholars, the MPA is remarkably global yet also small enough to produce a tight-knit community.

Much of the MPA learning experience happens in the field. Students travel to exciting new destinations the world over to study the implementation and impact of major policy initiatives and real policy problems.

In the classroom, students are immersed in cutting edge areas of study: complexity theory, human security studies, risk, finance, organization studies and economics, entirely in English.

Paris is a place where decisions affecting people and communities throughout the globe are made, making it an ideal location to pursue an MPA. Dual degrees are also offered with Columbia, the LSE and other major universities.

Master of Public Affairs

www.mpa.sciences-po.fr